

What do I know?	What do I want to learn?	How can I learn it?	How will I know I have learned it?
What do I already know/believe about classroom management, discipline, and building an inclusive learning community?	What are my concerns and what do I want to learn about classroom management, discipline, and building an inclusive learning community?	Where can I get the information I need to address my concerns and identify what I want to learn?	How can I evaluate what I learn?
One of the most important parts of classroom management is first creating relationships with the student. Discipline should clearly and logically reflect the action. I believe that restorative practices are beneficial. It is important to read and learn about people that are different from us to help create an inclusive environment.	My biggest concern is not being consistent enough with expectations. Often other teachers will come up to me and explain that one of my students did something and it needs to be handled and I just talk to them about making better choices. I wonder if I am stern/strict enough?	The first place I always go is to my mentors, trusted colleagues and reach out to other teachers. I find that a lot of other teachers (on Instagram, other online communities) have a wealth of knowledge that they are willing to share. Finally, I talk to my counselor about it.	I think one of the best ways to evaluate what I learn is to practice it. I also think that reflection is a great way to compare what I learn and how I plan to use it.
